I can't figure out how to make this JavaScript menu stay at the bottom of my page when the user scrolls up or down. I have tried using jquery's position, absolute and relative, but I'm guessing that I'm doing something wrong since I'm using jQuery `$(window).scroll(function() { if ($(this).scrollTop() > 150) { $('.menu').css('top', '200px').css('bottom', '50px'); } else { $('.menu').css('top', '150px').css('bottom', '50px'); } });` A: You can use the "position" CSS property, or the "top" and "bottom" properties. To do so, you would simply add: `position: fixed;` or `top: 150px; bottom: 50px;` to the css style used for the menu. You can even use "right" and "left" properties to position the menu left and right with respect to its container, using something like this: `right: -200px;` Edit: This article about "position" CSS properties should help you get started. A: how about a combination of sticky js plugin? ZEMBENI WARGENTI They are a Tribal House, black, amazing taste. The people still live in the stones of those halls centuries old, they are bad corals to the time to open an ancient Past, as they do not go to a city, are the only village of Italians. Those houses, still are there, they also can't be touched in any way, they are protected. And then comes the most interesting part, they do not know how they live, that's why they are still worshipped, or f678ea9f9e
