The essay in EN 106 asks you to produce a thesis-driven academic essay. Your essay must have a clear, original thesis, well-developed supporting points, a logical organization, and writing that is free from major mechanical errors. In addition, you are required to incorporate (via direct quotation or paraphrase) information from two readings. You will use your textbook (Greene and Lidinsky) with this exam.

You will compose a thesis-driven essay that makes use the following essays (all essays are in Chapter Seventeen of Greene and Lidinsky):

- • Anna Lappe's "The Climate Crisis at the End of our Fork," pp. 750-762.
- • Michael Pollan's "Why Bother?" pp. 763-768.

Each of these essays addresses the broad topic of environmental sustainability—how humans interact with the natural world, our responsibilities as citizens of the natural world, and the gap that sometimes exists between the rhetoric of the environmental movement ("organic," "sustainable," "community-owned") and the economic and social realities of the movement.

You will write a critical, thesis-driven essay on some conversation raised in the readings or suggested by them. In order to write your essay, you will need to hone in on a specific conversation of interest represented in the readings, and then craft your own thesis that makes a contribution to that conversation. Your thesis must articulate your own contribution, not simply reiterate arguments made in the readings. Remember that you
